

	The Duality of Human Nature (Good / Evil)	Reputation, Science and Society	Silence, Secrecy and Deceit	Fear, Horror and Violence	Mystery, Tension and Suspense
Dr Jekyll (Respected Doctor and friend of Utterson and Enfield)	“the two hands are in many points identical” (5) – Utterson “man is not truly one but truly two” (10) – Dr Jekyll	“pink of the proprieties” (1) “tables laden with chemical apparatus” (5) – Jekyll’s study	“there came a blackness about his eyes” (3) “like some disconsolate prisoner” (7)	“If I am the chief of sinners, I am the chief of sufferers also” (6) – Dr Jekyll	“Henry Jekyll became too fanciful for me. He began to go wrong” (2) – Utterson on Jekyll
Mr Hyde (A strange, frightening outsider)	“It wasn't like a man; it was some damned juggernaut” (1) – Describing the trampling incident at the start of the novel	“down-right detestable” (1) “Edward Hyde alone in the ranks of mankind was pure evil” (10)	“My devil had been long caged he came out roaring” (10) – Jekyll speaking on Hyde	“Satan's signature” (2) “a man sorely contorted and still twitching” (8) – J/H’s death	“he was simply blotted out” (6) – Mr Hyde disappearing
Mr Utterson (Prominent Lawyer and friend of Jekyll)	“Austere with himself” (1) “I incline to Cain’s Heresy” (1) – i.e. “Am I my brother’s keeper?” – Stays out of others business	“Where Utterson was liked he was liked well” (3)	“They were both pale and there was an answering horror in their eyes” (7) – with Enfield	“his blood ran cold in his veins” (5)	“If he be Mr. Hyde... I shall be Mr. Seek” (2)
Dr Lanyon (Reputable Doctor and friend of Jekyll)	“an ignorant blatant pedant” (3) – Utterson’s opinion on Lanyon	“hearty healthy dapper red-faced gentleman” (2)	“my life, my honour, my reason are all at your mercy” (9) – Jekyll to Lanyon	“deep-seated terror of the mind” (6) “something seizing surprising and revolting” (9)	“the rosy man had grown pale; his flesh had fallen away” (6) – after having witnessed the transformation
Mr Poole (Jekyll’s Butler)	“why did he cry out like a rat” (8) – Poole on his master	“that masked thing like a monkey jumped from among the chemicals” (8)	“stood huddled together like a flock of sheep” (8) – the servants	“his face was white” (8) – Poole’s face	“Weeping like a woman or a lost soul” (8) – Poole describing Jekyll
Sir Danvers Carew (A well-liked gentleman)	“ape-like fury he was trampling his victim” (4) – the maid describing the crime	“beautiful gentleman with white hair” (4) “brilliantly lit by the full moon” (4)	“[the maid] had an evil face smoothed by hypocrisy” (4) – is good/evil so clear cut?	“a crime of singular ferocity” (4) “bones were audibly shattered” (4)
Setting		“shop fronts stood along that thoroughfare with an air of invitation, like rows of smiling saleswomen” (1)	“The fog still slept on the wing above the drowned city” (5)	“sinister block of building” (1) “a crushing anticipation of calamity” (8) – before discovering Jekyll	“labyrinths of lamplighted city” (2) – mazes, not being able to find the way out, darkness etc....